- 5.2 Without limitation on the generality of the foregoing, Agencies, shall be considered to have a conflict of interest and shall not be selected, under any of the circumstances set forth below:
 - a. Conflicting activities: (i) a firm that has been engaged by CDRI to provide goods, works or Assignment/job other than consulting Assignment/job for a project, shall be disqualified from providing consulting Assignment/job related to those goods, works or Assignment/job. Conversely, a firm hired to provide consulting Assignment/job for the preparation or implementation of a project, shall be disqualified from subsequently providing goods or works or Assignment/job other than consulting Assignment/job resulting from or directly related to the firm's consulting Assignment/job for such preparation or implementation. For the purpose of this paragraph, Assignment/job other than consulting Assignment/job are defined as those leading to a measurable physical output, for example surveys, exploratory drilling, aerial photography, and satellite imagery.
 - b. Conflicting Assignment/job: (ii) An Agency (including its Personnel and Sub- Agencies) shall not be hired for any Assignment/job that, by its nature, may conflict with another Assignment/job of the Agency. assessment for the same project, and an Agency assisting an CDRI in the privatization of public assets shall not purchase, nor advise purchasers of, such assets.

- c. Conflicting relationships: (iii) An Agency (including its Personnel and Sub-Agencies) that has a business or family relationship with a member of CDRI's staff who is directly or indirectly involved in any part of (I) the preparation of the Terms of Reference of the Assignment/job, (ii) the selection process for such Assignment/job, or (iii) supervision of the Contract, may not be awarded a Contract, unless the conflict stemming from this relationship has been resolved in a manner acceptable to CDRI throughout the selection process and the execution of the Contract.

Any such disclosure shall be made as per the Standard forms of technical proposal provided herewith. 5.4 No current employees of CDRI shall work as Agencies under this assignment.

6. Unfair Advantage

6.1 The Agency selected for this assignment shall not be given any special preference or consideration for other projects/assignments to be taken up in the future by CDRI. The selected Agency shall also not be barred from participating in future projects/assignments unless there is a conflict of interest as per para 5 above.

6.2 Fairness and transparency in the selection process require that the Agencies or their Affiliates competing for a specific assignment do not derive a competitive advantage from having provided consulting services related to the assignment in question.

7. Proposal

7.2 Agencies may only submit one proposal. If an Agency submits or participates in more than one proposal, such Agencies and their proposals shall be disqualified from the RFP process.

7.4 Furthermore, it is the Agency's responsibility to ensure that its Experts, joint venture members, Sub-Agencies, agents (declared or not), sub-contractors, service providers, suppliers and/or their employees meet the eligibility requirements as established in this document.

7.5 The Agency (including the individual members of any Joint Venture, if Joint venture allowed as indicated in the Data Sheet) shall submit only one Proposal, either in its own name or as part of a Joint Venture in another Proposal. If an Agency, including any Joint Venture member, submits or participates in more than one proposal, all such proposals shall be disqualified and rejected. 8. Proposal Validity

- 8.1 The Part II Data Sheet to Agency indicates how long Agencies' Proposals must remain valid after the submission date. During this period, Agencies shall maintain the availability of Professional staff nominated in the Proposal and keep the financial proposal unchanged. CDRI will make its best effort to award the work within this period. Should the need arise, however, CDRI may request Agencies to extend the validity period of their proposals. Agencies who agree to such extension shall confirm that they maintain the availability of the Professional staff nominated in the Proposal and their financial proposal remain unchanged, or in their confirmation of extension of validity of the Proposal, Agencies could submit new staff in replacement, who would be considered in the final evaluation for contract award. Agencies who do not agree have the right to refuse to extend the validity of their Proposals, under such circumstance CDRI shall not consider such proposal for further evaluation.

GLOBAL STUDY ON AIRPORT RESILIENCE – PHASE 2

1. Project Background

Airports are key building blocks of aviation infrastructure and play a critical role in national, regional, and global connectivity. They provide employment opportunities, essential multimodal transport services as well as function as a business thereby promoting economic well-being. Airports are in fact a system that comprises many partners including customers, staff and community. It is estimated that they contribute to more than 30 million jobs globally. Today, there is an increasing recognition that climate change and extreme events are frequently disrupting airport operations and services. Disruptions and damage to airports (from natural or man-made hazards) lead to direct losses as well as associated economic impacts thereby affecting lives and livelihoods of millions. As a result, it has become even more important for airports to build disaster resilience.

Airports face a unique set of challenges when it comes to building disaster resilience. Around the world, airports have been built on land below sea level, alongside coasts, floodplains, on reclaimed land, etc., increasing their exposure to natural and man-made hazards. Further, given the long-term nature of these structures, risks are continually changing over time. Increasing frequency and intensity of extreme weather events (due to climate change) as well as changes in the built environment in and around the airport (e.g. expansion) are adding to the risk profile.¹

Airports cater to large volumes of transient people who, in cases, have low situational awareness. In the event of a disaster, this concentration of people may increase the adverse impacts. Airports also require large circulation spaces. The unique open architecture of airport terminals also makes them vulnerable to non-structural damage due to wind and seismic events. A sharp focus on the resilience of airports has been brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic. It has challenged long-held notions of assessment of future risk and infrastructure governance.

Airports are iconic assets. They attract large capital investments from both the private and public sectors. While they have historically enjoyed a moderate degree of cash flow certainty, they have also offered greater potential for growth than more traditional infrastructure assets. But unlike more traditional infrastructure assets, airports serve airlines as their primary clients and therefore share in the fortunes and woes of a highly cyclical industry. Airport valuations are predicated on expected future cash flows, which are in turn underpinned by passenger demand for travel.² To this extent, risk management is hardwired in investment planning for airports. However, this is often based on risk management approaches and risk profiles which fail to account for growing uncertainty, particularly with respect to a change in the type, intensity and practicability of climate driven hazards.

¹ While this ToR primarily concerns the disaster resilience of airports, including to climate driven hazards, It is also important to acknowledge wider resilience issues which concern the future business model of airports, chiefly the pressure to decarbonise because of climate change and changes in technology.

² The New Normal for Airport Investment - PwC In <https://www.pwc.com/gx/en/capital-projects-infrastructure/publications/assets/pdfs/pwc-the-new-normal-for-airport-investment-nov-2013.pdf>

Airports are asset-intensive businesses that require extensive amount of time to recover the significant financial investments in the specific infrastructure, like runways and terminals. This aspect forces airports investors to make strategic moves and to carefully calculate the risks before taking investment decisions.³ Given this context, experts have argued that protection of airport assets, profitability and continuity of operations hinge on risk assessments to infrastructure, early response, stakeholder collaboration as well as wider underlying actions to build disaster resilience of airport assets and systems.

Characterization of the infrastructure systems

The Coalition for Disaster Resilient Infrastructure focuses on infrastructure “systems” over individual infrastructure “assets” to help countries develop risk management frameworks for different infrastructure classes and associated development. These systems have national, regional and global dimensions (e.g., shipping, aviation) and the CDRI fosters collaboration to identify hotspots in the global infrastructure systems that may have cascading impacts. While CDRI has already picked up exclusive studies to address the vulnerability of the power infrastructure for cyclone hazards, the key focus of this initiative is airports.

Airports consist of a complex set of sub-systems including physical infrastructure, ICT systems for operations and control, institution, regulations and human resources for coordination and management. Apart from the movement of people airports also move essential goods. Geographically, they cater to the regional socio-economic requirements and employment opportunities. Interruption to airport systems in an interconnected world can have immediate and far-reaching consequences on society and on the local economy. Therefore, there is a need to critically evaluate the impact of the disaster events, plan for quick turn-around time for restoration of services.

1.1 Disaster Risk and Resilience

Resilience is defined as *'the ability of a system, community or society exposed to hazards to resist, absorb, accommodate to and recover from the effects of a hazard in a timely and efficient manner, including through the preservation and restoration of its essential basic structures and functions.'*⁴

Typically, a Disaster Risk Reduction/Management (DRR/DRM) approach seeks to treat and reduce risk (exposure x vulnerability) from specific, known hazards, whereas with resilience the focus is on building underlying capacity of a system to manage uncertainty (including a range of hazards, both known and unknown),⁵ placing additional emphasis on the expedition of recovery and facilitation of adaptation.⁶

⁶ Jerry Velasquez, Director, Division of Mitigation and Adaptation, Green Climate Fund, 2015 - <https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/disaster-risk-reduction-resilience-jerry-velasquez>

“..in DRR, we focus on particular known hazards, in resilience we consider the unknown future, and take on all possibilities and combinations of threats”⁷

DRR/DRM and resilience are complementary approaches to reducing the impact of shocks and stresses.

While in recent years there has been a growing focus on building the resilience of airports, studies that systematically measure the influencing factors of airport resilience are in an exploratory stage. Several studies and advocacy reports such as the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) Climate Synthesis Report 2018, Airport Cooperative Research Program (ACRP) reports 2012 & 2015, have advanced this agenda. Airport authorities in a few countries have undertaken climate risk assessments. However, in most cases, the focus has been on airlines-related disasters. Limited attention has been given to disaster risk management and resilience of airports themselves. Several programmes have focused on strengthening the emergency response functions of airports during disasters. For example, the GARD (Getting Airports Ready for Disasters) programme by UNDP and DHL is one such partnership that focuses on airport disaster preparedness including the development of the Airport Surge Capacity Assessment (ASCA) Reports, coaching of airport staff, logistics training, etc. These efforts need to be complemented with a broader approach to disaster resilience planning for airports. There is a need to document as well as disseminate the shared understanding of disaster resilience in the context of airports globally.

This overall study will therefore seek to critically understand the disaster resilience of airport infrastructure around the world. The scope of this Phase is of two parts:

- A) A comprehensive Disaster Risk study of infrastructure across selected airports.
- B) Financing mechanisms for these airports investments in disaster resilient infrastructure.

The contracted entity/study team will take into account not only the core assets, but also focus on dependent infrastructure such as power systems, ICT systems (communication and control), functional & operational management systems, emergency response systems etc.

⁷ Please see full ' Concept Note Global Study on Disaster Resilience of Airports'

1.2 Purpose of the overall study

Two phases have been identified to understand the disaster resilience of airports around the world. This ToR is for Phase II, a focused study of selected airports, examining both existing disaster resilience and investor outlook towards financing resilience in airport infrastructure (financing mechanisms for airports and investments in disaster resilient infrastructure).

It is also understood that different airports are exposed to risks emanating from a range of geophysical and hydro- meteorological hazards. The study will not include malicious hazards such as bomb blasts and terror attacks however, a resilience-based approach seeks to build underlying capacity to a range of known and unknown shocks and stresses.

This in-depth study supports wider surveying of airport manager perceptions of airport resilience (Phase I) and will be followed by a third phase involving a deeper look at the causal factors (e.g., land use planning, construction technology etc.) that may enhance or hinder resilience to disasters. The first three phases of the study will be synthesized into a consolidated report (Phase IV), with clear recommendations for airport management and policy makers. This ToR only covers Phase II of the project.

Overall Study Phases

- Wide survey mapping the perceptions of airport managers on disaster resilience [Phase I]
- In-depth study taking stock of the current practices with regards to disaster risk management and resilience in airports in the context of infrastructure; and investor outlook towards financing resilience in airport infrastructure [Phase II - This ToR]
- Thematic Study which develops a comprehensive set of recommendations for disaster risk management and resilience in existing as well as future airports [Phase III]
- Synthesis report covering phases 1-3 (Phase IV).

2. Scope of Work

2.1 Overview

This ToR concerns an in-depth study investigating:

- The disaster resilience of infrastructure across selected airports
- Financing mechanisms for airports and investments in disaster resilient infrastructure

As discussed in section 1, disaster resilience requires a systems approach is expected including physical infrastructure, ICT systems for operations and control, institution, regulations and human resources for coordination and management.

While Phase I looked at 150 airports at least, Phase II will focus on a smaller number of airports around 10 -12 globally, including those in CDRI member countries and otherwise, representing a variety to study in depth.

It is expected that the selection of airports is drawn from a sampling framework within which this study will be situated. For example, within the broad category of civil-transport airports, there is a large variation in the typology of airports in terms of size, investment profile, the volume of passenger traffic they handle, passenger catchment areas they serve, geoclimatic and geographic location and their criticality in the national or international network of airports. This study will cover a mix of local airports, regional airports, national airports and primary (international hub) airports.

The study will not cover airports that do not operate scheduled flights. The parameters for selection of airports and an indicative list have been provided in Appendix II.

One possible approach is to develop a set of airport clusters based on attributes such as exposure to disaster risk, geography, size, investor type etc. Airports could then be sampled from these clusters. The study will aim to focus on a representative group of airports so that the final set of recommendations are broadly applicable.

2.1.1 Disaster resilience of infrastructure across selected airports

The resilience analysis shall understand existing airport hazard exposure, including key hazards and mapping procedures, extreme temperatures (and its effect on navigational signals, satellite coverage, runway length), storm (wind/rain/prevalence of lightning strikes) impact on airports, air traffic and ground surface access, and flooding potential from sea/wave, or storm. The analysis will also evaluate potential disruption due to geological/topographical impacts (land subsidence/slippage and volcanic eruption) and understand disruption due to interruptions to necessary supporting infrastructure (eg power, potable water, data and the like) and consider the ability to secure assets/operations in the event of an extreme event. The study will evaluate the influence that each disaster risk may have on operations such as (non-exhaustive list):

- Airport asset integrity
- Airport operational continuity (flights)
- Knock-on dependent services such as energy supplies

- Financial viability resilience
- Airport business continuity (shops, hotels, transport services)
- Airport communication system integrity
- Strategic airport operations e.g., humanitarian response capabilities Political Economy

Indicative research areas are provided in Appendix I. An indicative list of potential impacts and stressors is presented in Appendix III.

Infrastructure design, planning and construction standards would need to be examined to understand if they are adequate to respond to current and future disaster risks. An investigation of any historical disaster impact is also to be undertaken to understand existing measures with respect to resilient planning and design. Understanding existing organizational resilience measures including the existence, sophistication and testing of business continuity plans, as well as understanding of system interdependencies and related mitigation is essential.

2.1.2 Financing mechanisms for airports and investments in disaster resilient infrastructure

Phase II also includes a study of current investment mechanisms for airports and possible risk financing techniques in the face of future uncertainties. The study would focus on the current state of practice and how investment planning for airports needs to take place in the future. It is important to consider the different types of airport ownership structures. There is also the need for delineation that each ownership type may have on financing mechanisms for DRI. In the simplest terms, a for-profit airport operation may have materially different investment drivers for DR infrastructure as compared to airports subsidized by national budgets.

In this context, the existing and emerging role of various risk transfer mechanisms will also be explored. The investment analysis seeks to identify opportunities to better align the projected funding streams to potential resilience financing mechanisms and (re)allocate risk equitably among stakeholders. In particular the financing analysis shall attempt to understand:

- i. What are the existing finance and funding models and mechanisms used by the selected airports?
- ii. To what extent is funding to increase resilience considered a priority and does this differ between funding and ownership types?
- iii. Is financing available to airports for infrastructure resilience measures?
- iv. Are potential risks to future revenues as a result of hazards well understood and accounted for in investment risk analyses?
- v. What are the existing insurance and financial risk provisions and how could we better align the benefits and risks between stakeholders?
- vi. To what extent do current finance and funding models match the projected benefits and risks?
- vii. What other 'resilient' finance / funding mechanisms are available that could be used?
- viii. How willing the current stakeholder appetite is to invest in these?

Bidders are expected to further develop overarching and specific research questions as well as proposing an initial research methodology and sampling strategy. Broad activities are included below. Sequencing is open to discussion and further activities can be proposed by bidding entities.

Activity 1: Inception

- Inception Meeting
- Confirm research methodology and airport sampling strategy
- Inception Report

There will be a meeting between client and contracted entity to discuss planned aspects of the assignment, including scope, understanding of the assignment, approach, output, timeline, quality assurance and control measures. This meeting is an opportunity for the client and contracting entity to discuss and agree the research methodology as outlined in the successful proposal. The contracted entity will subsequently provide a concise inception report detailing agreed points. This report shall be approved by the client.

CDRI will establish a core Steering Committee (SC) from member countries and subject experts to contribute to provide overall guidance and approval of the deliverables across the following activities.

This sampling and research methodology will require SC approval before progressing to the next stage.

Activity 2: Desktop Research of Airports

- Desktop study of identified airports investigating airport infrastructure disaster resilience arrangements and financing mechanisms for disaster resilient infrastructure.
- Examples of best practices for disaster resilience in infrastructure design, planning, construction and financing for airports as well as barriers.
- Refine questions and plan interview material / methods and identify stakeholders.
- Share interim desktop report

The contracted entity will review existing aviation sector policy and regulatory frameworks, hazards analysis and existing resilience measures, undertake deeper sector analysis of main investment and non-investment bottlenecks, and identify overall sector growth strategy, policy frameworks and investment programs. The interim desktop report will identify main challenges and operating conditions related to resilience to stressors and business continuity planning including cost recovery, sustainability, efficiency, competition and targets for change and reform actions. This report will be approved by the Steering Committee.

Activity 3: Key Informant Interviews (KII)

- Conduct interviews
- Report progress

There will need to be strong engagement of airport stakeholders and identification of the manager or most appropriate person to interview, with a consistent approach to engagement and a consistent seniority and role/type of respondent across airports. It will be necessary to speak to a range of experts per airport including airport managers, investors (government / private), resilience professionals, engineers etc.

The contracted entity will be responsible for all organisation, facilitation, and collection activities and will need to identify appropriate forums and methods for the consultation process including virtual consultations, in-person consultations and field visits.

Interviews will be supported by robust data collection practices.

Activity 4: Focus Group Discussions (FGD) Focus Group Discussions

- Identify stakeholders, plan and organise FGDs
- Get the interview methods and stakeholders approved by the Steering Committee
- Administer the FGDs
- Report progress and initial findings

The contracted entity will be expected to invite a small sample of managers to participate in Focus Group Discussions. Focus Groups may include (but not necessarily be limited to): Airport specific FGDs, Thematic FGDs (i.e., investor FGDs, resilience manager FGDs etc.).

The contracted entity will be responsible for all organization, facilitation, and collection activities and will need to identify appropriate forums and methods for the consultation process including virtual consultations, in-person consultations and field visits.

It is expected that interviews and focus group discussions will happen in-person. A team of Agencies (including senior personnel) are expected to conduct field-visits to all the airports. The expected time for such field visits is shared in the table below.

Size of Airport	Number of days
Large	7 - 10
Medium	5 - 7
Small	2 - 4

*This is the suggested field visit days within which Interviews, FGDs are expected to be completed.

Activity 5: Data Analysis

- Analysis of desk research
- Analysis of KII and FGD responses
- Interim reporting of findings

This stage should identify answers to core airport resilience and financing questions and provide analysis through geographical and other research lenses. These studies will consider both the current state of practice and how resilience and investment planning for airports needs to take place in the future.

It will be necessary to present interim findings to the Steering Committee.

The contracted entity will develop case studies on each airport. A total of 10 – 12 case-study reports will need to be submitted.

Further, the outputs of Activity 4 and Activity 5 will be programmed into a series of three workshops and two interim reports. The approximated timelines for these outputs are shared in Section 5.

Activity 6: Final Dissemination Workshop

- Workshop to discuss key findings

This workshop with the Steering Committee will provide an opportunity to validate and elaborate on findings from previous activities.

Activity 7: Write-up and Reporting

- Draft the observations and findings
- Identifying gaps in practice and knowledge
- Provide recommendations that are transferable to risk and resilience planning of airports in the future.
- Present to the Steering Committee and seek feedback.
- Final documentation, analysis and delivery of report.

The contracted entity will be expected to present common themes/recommendations emerging from the case study in a clear and well-structured report. This will be in the form of a practical guidance document for airports globally. These studies will gear towards deriving a set of recommendations for disaster resilience and resilience financing for existing as well as future airports.

3. Expected Phase II Deliverables

The expected set of deliverables include:

- a) Inception Report: This report will be developed within the first 15 days after award of contract. This report will identify any relevant literature related to airport infrastructure resilience, initial stakeholders, confirm research methodology, work plan and interim discussion on possible report format and table of contents.
- b) Workshops: Three interim workshops will be delivered that cover the themes of resilience and finance. These workshops will aim to sensitize larger audiences on airport resilience issues as well as serve a platform to showcase interim findings from the study.

Appendix 3: Potential Impacts and Climate Stressors (indicative only)⁹

The impacts and climate stressors presented below are not comprehensive but presents a starting point for this study. Many airports may remain vulnerable to these events as the risks of infrastructure failure, flooding, flight disruptions and cancellations become more likely. Airports need to understand the risks and initiate adaptation measures for both existing and new infrastructure, as well as managing critical operations to become more resilient to the changing climate. More extreme weather- and climate-related events are expected as the climate continues to change. Trends in frequency, intensity, spatial extent, duration and timing of events are expected to increase and catalyse a fundamental transformation of the socio-economic system as well.
